MELANCHOLY CASUALTY -It is with unfeighned sorrow that we learn, by telegraphic intelligence received here on Tues day evening last, that Mr. James R Me-Kain, with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth McKain, civizens of our town, also Mrs. laughan and her daughter Miss Virgin la. former residents of this place, all per ished by the destruction of the steamer Orilne St. John which was consumed by fire on the Alabama River, on Tuesday evening last, between Mobile and Montgomery. Mr. McKain and his mother were on their way back home from a visit to Mobile. Mrs. Vaughan and daughter were also on their way to visit Camden. All expected to arrive here, we believe, on Saturday evening last. This melancially Intelligence has cast a deep gloom over our whole community. Recently, in many circles, our citizens have been sorely afflicted, each affliction in its order seeming to be more severe and distressing Surely this is so, to a greater extent than any other which has preceded it. To lose our friends at any time and under any circumstance is painful; but to part thus with them is sorrowful judged. In the death of Mr. McKain, our town is deprived emn burial. His remains were interred in the of one of its best, most useful, and ener-burying ground at Liberty Church on Monday getic citizens. We can only mingle our sympathies withthe bereaved friends and relations, and bow with submission to the will of divine providence, which in its mysterious dispensation, has laid us hand so beavily upon us -- Canden Journal.

______ OBITUARY.

"Gob is NO RESPECTOR OF PERSONS." On Sunday last I heard of the death of my young friend D. R. WILLIAMS, this was melancholy news, I was astounded; for he was a noble youth of manly mem, large frame and healty body. But alas, he has siped the bitter cut that awaits us all; he has past from us to that boone from whence no traveller returns; his spirit has gone to God who gave it. Never before have I witnessed such a silent and solmorning successling his death. The morning was unusually cool and calm; all nature seem ed to mourn on this sad occasion. At 10 o'clock, the corpse arrived attended by his brothers, sisters, other relatives and friends, and here to add more sadness to the scene, we were informed that his aged parents were unable from protracted illness, to witness the last sad rights of their beloved son. And oh! shall I ever forget the countenance of Elia, the eldest sister; she was a beautiful girt, tall and comely, with intellectual features. She wept not, for "marble statue," with chisled features, not a muscle relaxed, not a tear drop glistened upon her cheek, but her eyes were transfixed upon the open yault; ah! a being too pure for earth. red behind some rault of the previous dead, and there gave vent to my feelings.
